LAWRENCE HOWE

1885-1942

Most of the Alumni have already heard of the sudden death, on March 17, of Mr. Lawrence Howe. The father of five of our graduates, he had had the unique experience of having had at least one child in the School every year since its foundation, until his youngest son left last June to go to Harvard—a continuous record of twenty-one years. He also had the distinction of being the personal friend of more members of the Alumni body than any other person associated with it except perhaps some of the oldest of the faculty.

Certainly almost every graduate, and also most of the undergraduates, even down to the very youngest children, felt he was their friend whom they were free to consult about their problems because they were always sure of his genuine interest and understanding. His name was used as a reference on college entrance blanks and business forms more than any other in the School.

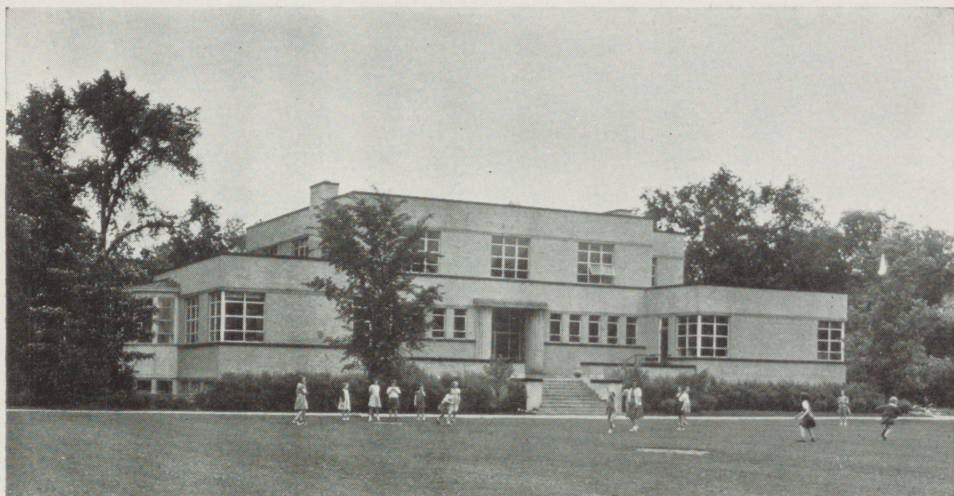

At the time of his death he was still a member of the Board of Directors of the School, and had just completed a term as its President. He was also a member of the Board of Trustees of the School's Foundation Fund. He had always been active in the work of the Parents Association and had served as its President.

Perhaps many of the Alumni remember him best for his vigorous and delightful performances in the five Senior Parents' Stunts, in which he participated whenever one of his children was about to be graduated. He was a familiar sight on the campus at almost any time, for there was nothing connected with the School which could fail to elicit his eager interest. He seldom missed a football game or other athletic contest; no parents' picnic was complete without him especially if a father and son's ball game was in prospect. He was faithful in attendance at all committee and Board meetings, and he was almost sure to turn up at every school or class dance before the evening was over.

It is hard to realize that we may not expect to see him on the grounds again. The manner of his death was characteristic of him, quick and vigorous. He had attended a meeting of the Board but a few days before and had joined the family games after supper the night he died. After going up to bed as usual, a sudden heart attack overcame him in the night.

The Memorial Services held in the School auditorium were solemn, beautiful, and deeply moving. The room was almost completely filled, so many of his friends had come to honor his memory. It was a great tribute. The School has lost one of its best and most beloved friends, but his spirit of courage, enthusiasm, sincerity, and love of life makes him continue as the personification of the ideals we are striving to achieve.

PERRY DUNLAP SMITH

WILLOUGHBY WALLING HALL

It was a great pleasure to find the response to the first issue of the Bulletin so great and, on the whole, so enthusiastic. Certainly as I read the articles and notes I felt myself in closer contact with the graduates of the School than I have been before. It was good to hear bits of news from so many of you and to learn of all the various events and changes that are shaping your lives.

I hope, too, that many of you have had the same experience that I did in receiving follow-up letters apropos of some note in the Bulletin which led to an exchange of ideas and news with someone with whom I had not been in touch for many years. Many requests came in to me for news of the present policies and recent changes in the School, and from various statements in some of the letters, it would seem that some of you, at least, had not been brought up to date on several points. This I shall be very glad to try to do, for nothing is easier than to forget that memories of one's childhood are always deeply colored by emotion or that one tends to assume that a school remains fixed at about the phase it was in the year one left it.

Our school, you may remember, was committed to what used to be called the principles of Progressive Education. In 1919 when we began, the phrase had meaning. Today it is hard to say what it does mean except that nearly everyone feels sure he knows and is very violent and certain about his approval or disapproval of it. Be that as it may, almost anyone will admit that to be "progressive" one cannot stand still; one must at least progress in some direction and certainly a school would be expected to live up to that standard.

I believe we have done so. Each year the teachers start out to study their new groups of pupils to determine as far as possible the needs and characteristics of that particular group. Only after that has been done is the course of study made out in detail for the year; and even then it does not necessarily have to be adhered to if some subsequent observation should convince us that something better could be done. The teachers themselves make out this curriculum and hand it in to me. After I study these plans, they are discussed with the teachers and in faculty meetings, and then bound in a book and kept for reference for all the faculty.

This method of building the course of study "from the ground up" is decidedly rare. Many teachers who join our staff are astonished at it, for they have been used to having the curriculum "handed down from on high", ready made as it were, and are not used to thinking through such problems for themselves. It does, of course, take a teacher of considerable ability and judgment to do this; a weak teacher or an indolent one will not be able to measure up to such responsibility, but we do not want to risk children with weak or mediocre teachers anyway, and the system has a strange way of bringing its own reward because of the way it develops and increases the stature of those who use it. (The Commission set up by a Carnegie Foundation grant to study the best method of training teachers while in service, was greatly impressed by what we have done in this direction. We are the only private school included in this nation-wide study.)

The new Lower School building, of which many of you have heard, and to which several of you made contributions I am proud to say, was designed in exactly this same way. The older ones of you remember old West Hall in which the High School was once housed as well as the administrative offices. Rumor had it that the building had once been the stables for the Garland estate when Knollslea Hall was a mansion with porte-cochère, greenhouse, and encircling verandah; and there was much to substantiate this theory. For years we made the best use we could of this structure until the parents came to our rescue and raised a fund to build a truly modern and completely equipped building that would house the Lower School and all its works.

We determined that we would plan this building wisely and well so that we should not have to make substantial changes in it as soon as it was put to use, as has happened so often in school construction. We began by asking each teacher to work out a floor plan which she considered ideal for the needs of the children in her charge. When these were finished, we had several meetings in which all the teachers discussed the various good points of each plan and eliminated non-essentials. The result was a floor plan for a grade room which seemed to meet the requirements of all the ages of children in the Lower School. Then the art, shop, and music teachers worked out plans to meet the special conditions of their subjects, and after that we had more faculty meetings to formulate complete units on different floors. When this was done, the architect was asked to work out ways of enclosing it all in walls and roof. This was no easy task, for among other things each grade teacher had insisted on having a southeast exposure for her room to catch the full value of the morning sunlight hours when the children would be in the room.

Mr. Edwin Clark, our architect, was ready with a solution, however, for by using modern functional design (and what could be more fitting for a Progressive school which boasts that it "fits the school to the child rather than makes the child fit into a rigid school") we were able to have, not six southeast rooms only, but actually eight, and many other advantages not possible in the more conventional Georgian architecture used in the other buildings. The parents, too, exerted a profound influence in working out the design of the building, principally through the building committee which worked long and late for months perfecting details of every sort as well as devising and in some cases actually designing methods of building techniques. The mothers' committee helped with the selecting of color schemes for each room and other points of interior decorating. Another took charge of the landscaping and planting problems most successfully.

The result is the best school building for young children it has been my good fortune to see anywhere. After nearly three years of use, we have not found that it needs to be changed in any of its essentials. The washed air, the automatically controlled humidity and heat, the sound proofing, and the sunlight—all combine to create a relaxed and healthful atmosphere that is most delightful for both mind and body.

Even after twenty years of "progressing" we still find it the business of the Lower School to concern itself with the teaching of reading, writing, and arithmetic. This goes on with increased efficiency in Walling, due not only to the more favorable environment, but also to all that we have continued to learn during these years about child development—how a child lives and grows and learns most happily and effectively. Our new building offers enriched opportunities for art, shop, and music. It has a room adequately equipped for grade ventures in cooking. As some of you will remember, from the first grade on the children remain for luncheon and rest, and have ample time for outdoor play on the school fields and hillside. This full day program, in addition to providing a well integrated day for the child, should mean much during these trying days to mothers who are devoting long hours to the service of the Red Cross and similar organizations. Old West Hall is gone and with it the noise and dust and crowded conditions that strained and tired the teachers and pupils alike. In its place is this new Willoughby Walling Hall, in which it is possible to do far better work than ever could have been accomplished without it.

I know that those of you who have not seen it will be proud of what has been accomplished by parents and faculty and pupils working together. These material conditions have changed very much for the better, but the old spirit of working out our problems together and keeping an open mind for changes which will help meet each new problem as it comes up is still there. I hope that as many of the Alumni as possible will visit the School once more and bring their ideas about us up to date. Any suggestions you have as to how we may do a better job will be most carefully considered by us and we shall be most grateful for them. I am sure you know how welcome any and all of you will be upon the campus at any time, but you probably do not realize how much pleasure you give the School when you come. I assure you it is very great.

OPERA 1942

To say that the 1942 opera was a success is to utter for the nth time North Shore's cliché for its operas. They have all been "successes"—even when voices have failed and orchestras have strayed widely from the score. Their success, of course, has been in the enjoyment of the audience and the participants. Everyone has a thrillingly good time at the opera.

But the 1942 opera was different. It will be forever memorable as a triple premiere: for the first time in the School's history, "Trial by Jury" was presented as the official opera (the Parents Association gave it in 1928 for the Commencement Stunts); for the first time in school history, opera departed from the Gilbert and Sullivan tradition; and, for the first time in school history, the words and the music of the opera were the creation of local talent.

Brilliant as was the performance of "Trial by Jury" (it had a smoothness and tempo unequalled in recent productions at the School), it was overshadowed by Duff and Jameson's "Zingabru". The score was written by Ramsay Duff, Director of the Music Department since 1931, and the story and lyrics by John Jameson, president of the Student Government and a member of the Junior class.

"Zingabru" is the tale of the trials of a guardian whose ward was impounded in a Chinese laundry for lack of a ticket. The combined efforts of a troop of Northwest Mounted Police, a bevy of sarong-clad jungle belles, and a tribe of dusky cannibals are needed to straighten the matter out.

All this was acted out on the Auditorium stage to the accompaniment of brilliant and catchy music, unusual stage sets, and superb costuming.

Daring and stunning as was the sarong-clad chorus, it was eclipsed by the chorus of chocolate-colored cannibals, replete with barbaric headdresses, ear and nose rings, bone and tooth necklaces, short straw skirts, anklets, spears, and hide-covered shields, who with handclaps and drum beats did jungle dance numbers that laid the audiences out cold at every performance.

It is perhaps too much to expect that a similar triumph can be achieved every year. The Gilbert and Sullivan tradition is too strong and valuable in the school life to be entirely abandoned. But the 1942 experience was a happy experiment.

THE SCHOOL AND THE WAR EFFORT

Immediately after the events at Pearl Harbor, the School began to adjust to the effort we were all eager to make to bring about the winning of the war.

"SPIKE" (ROBERT F.) MILLETT

The Seniors at once canceled their Senior play so that they might put the extra time on the job of organizing the School on a war footing.

The first thing to do, of course, was to organize air-defense wardens and to get the air-raid drills into shape. At first things were pretty confused at all Civilian Defense headquarters, particularly in Chicago; so we wrote straight to Washington and were able to get a fairly clear set of instructions as to how to proceed. Following these as closely as we could and adapting them to our needs, the Senior boys took over the jobs of air-raid wardens and fire wardens. It was necessary to call on the Junior boys to help them in order to have a trained group ready to start next year. The Junior boys, in the meantime, had taken over the student government in the School. The Senior girls organized themselves as auxiliary defense wardens for the air drills, two girls going to each of the grades in the Lower School as assistants to the grade teachers, for it was recognized at once that panic among the little children would be very difficult to control unless there were more adults assigned to each class than were available from the teaching staff. They also organized the details of the air-raid drill, and soon had the whole situation well in hand.

The air-raid drills now run smoothly, with the children going to their home-rooms to get books and supplies in order to keep busy during the period of the drill and to be prepared to make good use of their time in case they should be required to stay in the shelters. Fortunately, most of our buildings are reinforced concrete, so that we found plenty of good air-raid shelters ready at hand.

In the meantime the other grades in the School were organizing for the war effort, also. The sale of United States Government bonds and stamps was conducted in the lunchroom by tenth-grade boys and girls. Another group began a collection of waste materials, such as, phonograph records, toothpaste tubes, books, and clothing, and saw that they were distributed to the proper authorities. This work has continued to date and is rendering valuable service. The tenth-grade girls undertook the Junior Red Cross organization and have attended many of their meetings in Chicago and organized the work here. Mme. Parker instituted a sewing class to teach the proper method of sewing and conservation of clothing. Mr. Anderson has organized a class in first aid, which is proceeding among the older girls with great interest and vigor.

Two members of the faculty have already entered the armed services, and several others are very active in the Civilian Defense Program. As is already known to many, "Spike" (Robert F.) Millett, for fourteen years instructor of Latin and Social Studies, has been commissioned a Lieutenant, senior grade, in the Navy. Mr. Millett left school, April 10, to enter the United States Naval Air Station at Quonset, Rhode Island, for a three months' training course. "Spike's" classes have been taken over by Mrs. Childs and Katharine Leslie, '27.

Ned Morningstar was inducted into the Army last July and is stationed at Fort Wheeler in Georgia. Irving Telling, Mr. Morningstar's successor as fifth-grade teacher, has had his physical examination and has been ordered to report to the Army at the end of May.

In the civilian effort, the School has been quite conspicuous. Mr. Smith is Director of Training for Civilian Defense in Winnetka, and runs a Wednesday night school at Skokie School attended by over six hundred Winnetka citizens. The first two lectures in Mr. Smith's defense school were given by Ronald Gleason, director of the Middle School, and Nathaniel French, teacher of Social Studies in the Middle School. These two were the only qualified persons available at the time for those particular lectures in Winnetka. The third lecture in the series was given by Hobart Young, North Shore '33, who proved to be the only person in Winnetka authorized to give this training. He had taken the precaution of fitting himself for this work at the Metropolitan school soon after the war broke out. Hoby talked effectively on poison gases and was exceedingly well received.

"Doc" Anderson has been appointed official instructor in First Aid to the Fire Department. He has already completed one series of lessons and is starting another. Mr. Corkran is coordinator of youth activities under the program of health and recreation. The following members of the staff are block wardens in their home communities: Perry Smith, David Corkran, Nathaniel French, Ben Carpenter.

The changes in the curriculum, which the war brings about, must of necessity be more carefully considered and more slowly brought into being. We have received permission from most of the colleges to add a course in South American history for next year. The emphasis on globular geography and air-mindedness in the teaching of all social sciences is becoming greater and greater. The emphasis in mathematics and science on those phases of the subject which directly apply to navigation and engineering, of course, is much greater. The military authorities have asked that in English classes more effort be made to teach clear and distinct expression in both speech and writing so that there may be no misunderstandings of orders given or received. There is hardly a subject in the curriculum which has not been directly benefited and strengthened because of the necessity of meeting the present crisis.

NEW ENROLLMENT PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR FALL

Will Provide Pre-Kindergarten Class
And Change Enrollment Regulations
In Kindergarten, 1st - 2nd - 3rd Grades

The parents, faculty and Board of Directors of North Shore Country Day School have been conscious of the fact that the enrollment in the Lower School, from Kindergarten through 3rd grade, has not increased as we feel it should have in view of the school's facilities. There has been a feeling, also, that an increased enrollment would bring benefits to the pupils of these grades, as well as attain better use of the exceptional equipment afforded by Walling Hall.

Consequently, the Board of Directors appointed a committee, approximately two months ago, to investigate possible changes in enrollment regulations in the Lower School.

The committee has finished its work and has made the following recommendations which the Board has approved and which are presented herewith to the parents of the school:

Plan for Pre-Kindergarten Class: Beginning in the fall of 1942, the school will offer North Shore parents a Pre-Kindergarten class of not less than 10 pupils and limited to 15 pupils. This class will have its own separate room, and teacher, in Walling Hall. Tuition by contract will be $125 for the full year and no debenture will be required. Children may be entered on a monthly basis, without contract, for $15 per month.

Plans for Regular Kindergarten: Tuition will be reduced from the present $175 to $150 and no debenture will be required. The Kindergarten will use the regular kindergarten room and the class will be limited to 20 pupils. Children may be entered without contract at $20 per month.

Plans for the First Three Grades: Tuitions for each of the first three grades will remain fixed at the present fees, including the purchase of the $100 debenture each year, provided the enrollment in any grade does not exceed 15.

First Grade: In the event that the enrollment in the first grade exceeds 15 pupils, the tuition will be lowered by $10 for each child enrolled beyond the 15-pupil base. The limit of enrollment is set at 20 pupils. This means that the tuition which is now $250 per year would be reduced, for all children in the grade, to $240 should 16 pupils be enrolled in the first grade by October 15. The 17th pupil enrolled would bring another $10 reduction, until the maximum enrollment of 20 pupils had been attained, at which time the tuition would have been reduced to $200 per year. Changes in enrollment after October 15 would not affect the tuition.

Second and Third Grades: If the enrollment of either of these grades exceeds 15 pupils, the tuition will be lowered by $15 for each child enrolled beyond the 15-pupil base. The limit of enrollment for each grade is set at 20 pupils. Thus for the second grade the tuition of $325 would be reduced to $310 for all children in the grade, should 16 pupils be enrolled by October 15. The 17th pupil would bring another $15 reduction and the maximum enrollment of 20 pupils would result in a tuition of $250 for all pupils. In the case of the third grade, the present tuition of $375 would likewise be reduced by $15 for each child over the 15-pupil base enrolled, and the maximum enrollment of 20 pupils would result in a tuition of $300 for all pupils. Changes in enrollment after October 15 would not affect the tuition.

No Changes in Admissions Qualifications: As has been the practice always, the admission of any child to the school, and the limitation of boys and girls in the grades to effect the proper balance, is at all times at the discretion of the headmaster.

The new plans offer many more advantages, from the standpoint of encouraging enrollment, than those now in effect. It is the opinion of the Board, the headmaster, and the faculty of the grades involved that the new enrollment regulations should result in both an increased use of our excellent facilities without additional expense and a greatly strengthened Lower School.

The enrollment of the Middle and Upper Schools increased materially last fall and these new regulations, which are thoroughly in line with the trend of the times, are planned to bring about similar results in the Lower School.

Continued study is being given to the ways and means of meeting the new conditions which are ahead of us and of maintaining and increasing the educational advantages of the school.

THE COMMITTEE ON ENROLLMENT REGULATIONS

BASEBALL

The baseball season got off to an auspicious start when, in a strictly practice seven-inning game against the New Trier Varsity, North Shore came out on the long end of the scoring. For once North Shore seemed to have both pitching, in the hurling of Paul Williams, '43, and Bud Wilson, '43, and hitting, in the slugging by Bud Wilson, Bill Spiegel, '43, and Sam Earle, '42.

The early optimism suffered a momentary eclipse in the opening game when North Shore went down before Luther Academy, the 1941 Private School League champions, by the score of 7-5. North Shore outhit Luther 8-3, but wild fielding and dead feet on the bases blew an early 3-0 lead.

On May 2, however, the Purple bounced back to defeat Milwaukee, 9-8, in a free hitting game. North Shore got off to a four-run lead in the first and for two innings looked powerful. Then Milwaukee began to figure. In the first of the fourth Milwaukee went ahead 6-5. The locals, however, overhauled them, making the score 8-6. Milwaukee tied in the sixth. The game ran into extra innings. Finally in the eighth, Bill Taylor, '42, singled and stole second. Danny Boyd's ('44) bunt moved him down to third and Denny Boyd, '44, singled to drive in the winning run.

Scores for the season to date:

April 18	Luther 7—North Shore 5
May 2	Milwaukee 8—North Shore 9
May 6	Latin (cancelled, rain)
May 9	North Shore 8—University High 5

Editor's Note to the Alumni:

You will find below a list of the class secretaries in which some changes have been made since the first issue of the Bulletin. We wish to call attention to the fact that only through news items sent to your secretaries or to the School on the return post cards which have been sent to all alumni are we able to get material for the News of the Alumni. It often happens, therefore, that there are items about one member of a family and nothing at all about another although both are on the N.S.C.D.S. alumni lists. We urge you to make spontaneous use of your secretaries or to send news to the Editor of the Alumni Bulletin in care of the School in order that our reports may be as nearly accurate as possible.

It is not feasible at this time to publish a complete alumni register. Addresses are constantly changing, but we have wherever possible given new addresses which have been sent in to us, in particular those of men in the armed services. Many of you have asked for these and we all know how much men in the camps or overseas appreciate mail from friends at home. We hope you will use these service addresses and that more will be sent in.
